March 2004

State of the County 2004

"We are facing not one, but several, of the biggest challenges in our history."

Chairwoman Dianne Jacob addresses a crowd of more than 500 people at this year's State of the County address, held Feb. 4 at West Hills High School in Santee. Jacob stressed a number of themes in her address, including a call for unifying the region's many fire departments. She also talked about steps the County is taking to withstand financial challenges brought about by the state financial crisis. "The single most important thing we can do for the people of this region is to keep County government financially sound," she said.

No Ifs, Ands or Butts... County Enforces No Smoking Rules

County's Smoking Cop Keeps Eyes and Nose Open for Violators

Willie Pugh is a sleuth, but not the kind who's looking for a smoking gun.

Rather, Pugh knows that where there's smoke, there's probably a violation of smoking laws.

Pugh is a tobacco control officer with the County Health and Human Services Agency, and among his duties is acting as the eyes and ears of law enforcement officials for violations of laws that ban smoking in workplaces and other public buildings such as bars and restaurants.

"A lot of my job is to educate, especially the business owners. Whether you like the law or not, it is the law and we are diligent about enforcing it," said Pugh.

Much of the time, Pugh is out in the field, responding to complaints that have come into his office. Sometimes, he catches the culprit with evidence in hand. Other times, smokers seem to have a sixth sense and stub out their butts just before he walks in the door.

Willie Pugh has worked in tobacco control since 1985, and has logged 35 years as a County employee.

'100' is Magic Number for Ex-Employee

Mildred Betteridge Served as Secretary for the Board of Supervisors

Millie Betteridge spent her last day as secretary for the County Board of Supervisors more than 40 years ago, on Oct. 31, 1960. Since then, she's pursued a number of interests, from traveling, to playing tennis and bridge.

In January, she added one more accomplishment to her list – she turned 100 years old. Recently, St. Paul's Villa, the Hillcrest retirement center she calls home, threw a birthday bash for Betteridge and George DiCicco, a fellow resident who also passed the century mark. The celebration was marked with flowers, cards, cake and a Dixieland band.

Betteridge said she enjoyed the party, even though it left her a little tired.

"There's something magic about 100," she said.

Betteridge, formerly Mildred Alway, began her County career in 1937 as a junior stenographer in the Welfare Department. Two years later she became administrative secretary to the Board of Supervisors, a post she held for 21 years. Among her duties was acting as gatekeeper for all five elected members of the board.

Job Well Done

Correctional Deputy Probation Officer Alejandro Leos, an Army reserve staff sergeant, (right) is thanked for his service in Iraq by Lt. Gen. Ricardo Sanchez, commander of the coalition ground forces in Iraq. This photo was taken in mid-February in Baghdad. Leos served 14 months, 12 of them in Iraq, and is heading home following successful completion of his mission. Leos' reserve duty was in secure communications. Correctional Deputy Probation Officers David Pitts and Armando Solorio, also Army reservists, have returned from service in Iraq.

Golfers Wanted

The 8th Annual Volunteers in Probation Charity Golf Tournament is set for 1 p.m. on Friday, June 25 at the Carlton Oaks Country Club in Santee. County employees at all skill levels are invited to play, and the registration fee of $125 includes the cart, 18 holes of golf, lunch and dinner. The money raised by the event is used to help families become productive citizens. Volunteers in Probation (VIP) is a nonprofit organization that provides support to probationers, at-risk youth and their families through community partnerships and fundraising. For more information about the Charity Golf Tournament, contact VIP at (858) 514-3134.

How Can You Help a Child?

Three ways to help a child include sharing your life through adoption, becoming a foster parent or being a mentor. Foster Friends Outreach, a public-private partnership supported by the County Board of Supervisors, urges community members to get involved. Currently, more than 7,000 children are part of the foster care system in San Diego County. For information on adoptions, call (877) 423-6788, foster parenting, (877) 792-5437, and mentoring, (858) 616-5930.

CECO Campaign Raises Funds for Worthy Causes

The annual giving campaign for the County Employees Charitable Association and the United Way is in full swing, and CECO representatives are using creative ways to encourage their fellow employees to participate in this worthwhile program.

On March 25, County employees who work in the Mills Building will be invited to a "Tailgate on the Roof" event where employees can sign up for CECO or United Way payroll deductions, or increase their contribution if they want.

The tailgate event will take place on the upper level of the Mills parking structure, with a view of Petco Park and the aroma of grilled hot dogs. Anyone who signs up to donate, or increases their contribution, will get a hot dog, soda and bag of peanuts. There will also be speakers from agencies that are funded by the two charitable organizations.

This is just one of the many events and meetings that are taking place in every County department for this year's CECO/United Way campaign, which runs through March 31. Whether it's a tailgate party or a meeting in your department's conference room, the goal is the same – raising money for some very worthy programs in our County.

CECO uses its funds to pay for functional items such as equipment, medications, food, hygiene kits and vehicles, as well as camp and daycare scholarships. Every penny donated goes directly to the people and organizations that need it, because CECO is run by volunteers and has no overhead costs.

The United Way, for its part, pays for direct services and staff support to more than 195 nonprofit agencies, and provides one of every three San Diegans with basic necessities such as health care.

Currently, more than 3,000 employees give to CECO and more than 1,500 donate to United Way, adding up to total donations last year of $237,000 for CECO and $121,000 for United Way. Those are numbers we can all be proud of, but I think we can do even better.

As CECO volunteers say, a minimum contribution of $2 per pay period from every employee would raise nearly $1 million a year to help the neediest San Diegans. And think about this: the top CECO donation by a County employee is $100 per pay period!

So, when you attend your department's CECO/United Way meeting, please give what you can to these outstanding organizations. And if you're already giving, I thank you. I know that giving to charity can be tough on a family's budget, especially during these uncertain financial times. But if you could see the looks on the faces of people, young and old, who are helped by CECO and United Way, I know you'd believe the sacrifice is worthwhile.

Thanks for all you do every day and have a great month.

Smoking Enforcement

"You walk in the place and say, 'Dang,'" because smoke is so thick in the air, he said.

Pugh recalled one workplace he visited where the manager insisted no one was smoking on the premises. Pugh asked if they could check out his private office.

"He opened the door to his office and I almost got knocked down" from the smoke, Pugh recalled.

On a recent afternoon, Pugh checked restaurants and cafes in the central San Diego region that had been the subject of complaints. In several cases, the smell of cigarette smoke was clearly in the air, indicating that someone had been smoking just a short time before. At a Kearny Mesa billiard hall, Pugh walked in to find one of the billiard players puffing on a cigarette. Pugh asked the man to put out his cigarette, and admonished the owner that both she and her customer could face fines.

Before leaving, he pulled several "No Smoking" signs from his car and gave them to the owner to post in the billiard hall.

Under County policy, Pugh does not issue citations directly to those who violate smoking prohibitions. His job is to document potential violations, and forward the information to city attorneys for prosecution.

The County also uses grant funds to pay for tobacco enforcement by Sheriff's deputies and police officers in the unincorporated areas and the cities of Oceanside, La Mesa and Escondido. Police conduct sweeps of bars, and issue citations to people caught smoking. They also conduct decoy operations in which underage customers attempt to buy cigarettes.

Over the years, the laws against smoking in public places have become stricter, and California is a national leader in such legislation. San Diego County is also a leader in enforcing tobacco laws, said Pugh.

"We tell people, 'Welcome to San Diego, America's No Smoking section,'" he said.

Mildred Betteridge

"It was very interesting. I was in the front office," she said. In her job, she interacted with all of the County department heads and reporters, and she knew what was going on all over the County.

"I really enjoyed my job," she said.

She also had to walk a fine line as she dealt with the personalities of the different Board members over the years.

"You just had to not show any preference. You had to keep it equal," she said.

When she retired, her bosses honored her with a party in the supervisors' conference room and a special proclamation. According to an article in the San Diego Union, several hundred people showed up to wish her well in her retirement.

"In all of her contacts with the various members of the Board of Supervisors who have served the County during her career, and in all of her contacts with other employees of the County as well as with the general public, Mildred Lee Alway

Letters from satisfied customers served by County employees.

Debrah Champion, Randy Kerley and Janie Sargent (Animal Services) thanked staff at the South Animal Shelter for their assistance in helping a couple adopt a dog.

"I just wanted to let anyone who might read this e-mail know what a great job everyone at the South County Shelter is doing."

Andrew Freeman (County Counsel) and Gracelia Smith (Assessor/Recorder/Clerk) were recognized by a man whom they assisted with several recordation issues.

"You should be very proud of them and I hope you recognize them for outstanding service to the public."

Dawn Nielsen (Agriculture, Weights & Measures) received kudos for providing information to a man who was moving to San Diego County.

"Thanks for the friendly and thorough response, Dawn."

Veronica Rodriguez, Roberta Gonzalez, Catalina Ramon, Norm McGrath and Lucy Neves (Assessor/Recorder/Clerk) were thanked for helping a customer at the Vital Records Department.

"Please extend my sincere thanks to the terrific staff of the Vital Records Department in the main office of the San Diego County Recorder's office... My experience at the main office of the Vital Records Department has always been pleasurable and the staff has been unfailingly cooperative."

Joaquin Gracida (Assessor/Recorder/Clerk) was thanked for answering questions about an increase in a resident's taxes.

"I wanted to let you know Joaquin was the finest example of a service professional I've ever worked with at any governing agency's office."

has shown kindness, diplomacy and consideration," read the proclamation.

Betteridge was born in Denver, and after high school, earned a degree in English at Colorado University. She came to San Diego County in 1927, and worked for San Diego Gas & Electric before joining the County.

She attributes her long life to keeping active and eating right. In the past, she was an avid tennis player and ice skater, and she has always enjoyed dancing and traveling.

She has been to Europe and sailed through the Panama Canal, but her favorite destination is Hawaii.

These days, Betteridge says, she still enjoys playing bridge at St. Paul's Villa, and once a week, Kendall Moore, a volunteer at the center, takes her for a ride around the neighborhood in her wheelchair. She uses a walker for shorter trips within the building.

Peace Corps Bridges Gap Between Nations

County Employees Share Stories of Their Service

Former Peace Corps volunteers - and current County employees - Larry Hofreiter (l), Elaine White, and John Barr.

It's hard to say why people join the Peace Corps - a 27-month commitment that includes low pay, long hours, and separation from friends and family.

Three County employees who served in the Peace Corps each had their own motivations, but common themes emerge: a desire to meet people from other countries and experience their culture, an opportunity to help people who are less fortunate, and the chance to learn a new language.

March 1-7 is National Peace Corps Week, and it marks the organization's 43rd birthday. Since the Peace Corps was founded in 1961 during the Kennedy Administration, some 170,000 Americans have served in 137 countries.

Once their service is completed, Peace Corps volunteers are encouraged to share their stories as a way of educating Americans about other peoples and countries, and to highlight the benefits of enlisting in this volunteer organization.

"I would recommend it just to learn about another culture," said Elaine White, a Human Resources analyst who served in the former Soviet Republic of Turkmenistan, which is in Central Asia, bordering the Caspian Sea, between Iran and Kazakhstan. She joined the Peace Corps in 1998.

John Barr, a restaurant inspector with Environmental Health, served in Paraguay, a South American country nestled between Argentina and Brazil, beginning in 1988. During his time in the Peace Corps, he taught villagers about building safe and sanitary water wells and latrines, and also assisted with various projects ranging from vaccinations to planting vegetable gardens. There was one other benefit - he met his wife, Ana, while in Paraguay. The couple have been together 12 years and have two sons, Jeremiah, 6, and Jeffrey, 11.

Larry Hofreiter, with Planning and Land Use, also worked in Turkmenistan, at the same time as White. He was stationed in the capital city of Ashgabat, while White lived in a small village. Both Hofreiter and White taught English in the Peace Corps.

Both took back strong impressions from the country. For one thing, they expected to see democracy blossoming in Turkmenistan once it was freed from the Soviet yoke. Instead, the country is run by a dictator who installed posters, portraits and statues of himself, and even changed the names of the months in honor of himself and family members.

While government officials were less than welcoming, the volunteers were cheered by the gracious reception they received from regular citizens.

"We were rock stars," said Hofreiter of he and his fellow Peace Corps volunteers. People wanted to know all about the American visitors, he said. "The local people we worked with on the ground level were very, very receptive."

"What amazes me is the generosity of the people," said White. When she needed a place to live, she asked her students. One of them asked her family if White could stay with them, and they agreed. White lived with the family for two years, and they wouldn't accept any rent. Instead, she bought items for the household.

"I can't imagine taking someone in for two years," she said. In spite of their poverty, she said, "They would just give you anything."

When they weren't working, the Peace Corps volunteers tried the activities favored by locals. In the cities, that meant checking out an occasional disco or club. But in the village where White lived, the major recreation was drinking tea and gossiping, while snacking on roasted pistachios. She also did a lot of reading.

Those interested in finding out more about the Peace Corps can log on to www.peacecorps.gov, or call 800-424-8580.

Donald Holland and the Camp Barrett staff (Probation) were thanked by a grateful mother for helping her son turn his life around.

"Mr. Holland and staff have made a difference in both of our lives with a positive influence on my son, and I would like to thank them for all they have done."

Dr. Nikos Gurfield (Agriculture, Weights and Measures) was thanked for assisting a woman whose dog had been poisoned.

"Dr. Gurfield was so sensitive with my emotions, took the time to explain everything and really listened to me through my tears. I can't thank him enough for being there."

Linda Feeley (Agriculture, Weights and Measures) received kudos for acting quickly when she noticed a customer's vehicle leaking anti-freeze at the weights and measures meter lab.

"Linda spread absorbent to contain the discharge and prevent the off-site movement of this toxic liquid and then promptly reported the discharge to her supervisor. Good job Ms. Feeley!"

Diane Hall (HHSA) was thanked by a woman who lost her daughter to Sudden Infant Death Syndrome.

"(Diane) has been one of the biggest supporters of anything related to SIDS and the San Diego Guild for Infant Survival."

Mike Kaszuba (Air Pollution Control District) was thanked for training members of the San Diego Fire and Life Safety Services.

"Mike did an excellent job at explaining what can be a complicated process in filling breathable air bottles."

Krikor Bedrossian (General Services) was thanked by another County department for his efficient and courteous service when fixing an HVAC unit.

"He not only fixed the problem quickly but checked with us daily to make sure all was well. I can always rely on Krikor to communicate in a positive manner not only to myself but to all of my staff. He is dependable, helpful and a pleasure to work with."

The maintenance crew at the George Bailey Detention Facility was thanked for hard work and dedicated service to the kitchen areas.

"We are very thankful, the way you conduct your excellent services to our areas. Your willingness and quick response to our requests are always appreciated. That makes our operation run smoothly."

The Department of Public Works received kudos from people who attended a meeting of the Mission Beach Town Council.

"They made sure to add that it was obvious that the County of San Diego employed the most skilled, thoughtful and diligent workers."
